Enjoy the View

Milo McIver features more than 950 acres of lush forest and grassy meadows on natural terraces above the Clackamas River as well as vistas of three prominent Cascade peaks: Oregon's Mt. Hood and Washington's Mount St. Helens and Mt. Adams. A memorial viewpoint near the entrance honors Milo K. McIver, an Oregon State Highway Commissioner from 1950 to 1962.

Year-Round Day-Use Fun

Milo McIver State Park has two inviting day-use areas open year-round. The Riverbend day-use area has rolling grass meadows accented by maple and Douglas-fir trees. Here you will find trails, picnic shelters, restrooms, a 27-hole disc golf course, and a primitive boat launch. Picnic tables are located near each of the major parking areas. Several group picnic areas include shelters that accommodate large groups. The shelters are reservable through Reservations Northwest (1-800-452-5687).

The Riverside day-use area has picnic tables, a group picnic area, a boating/rafting access ramp, a large parking area, and a fish hatchery operated by the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife. The hatchery raises and releases more than a million Chinook salmon each year. The group picnic area near the hatchery can accommodate up to 200 people. Seven miles of hiking and horseback trails meander through meadows and forested hillsides.

Day-use visitors must have a valid parking permit. You can buy a daily permit at the park's entrance booth or purchase 12- and 24-month permits at major state park offices, including the Milo McIver office. Your camping receipt serves as a daily parking permit for the days you are registered.

Play it Safe

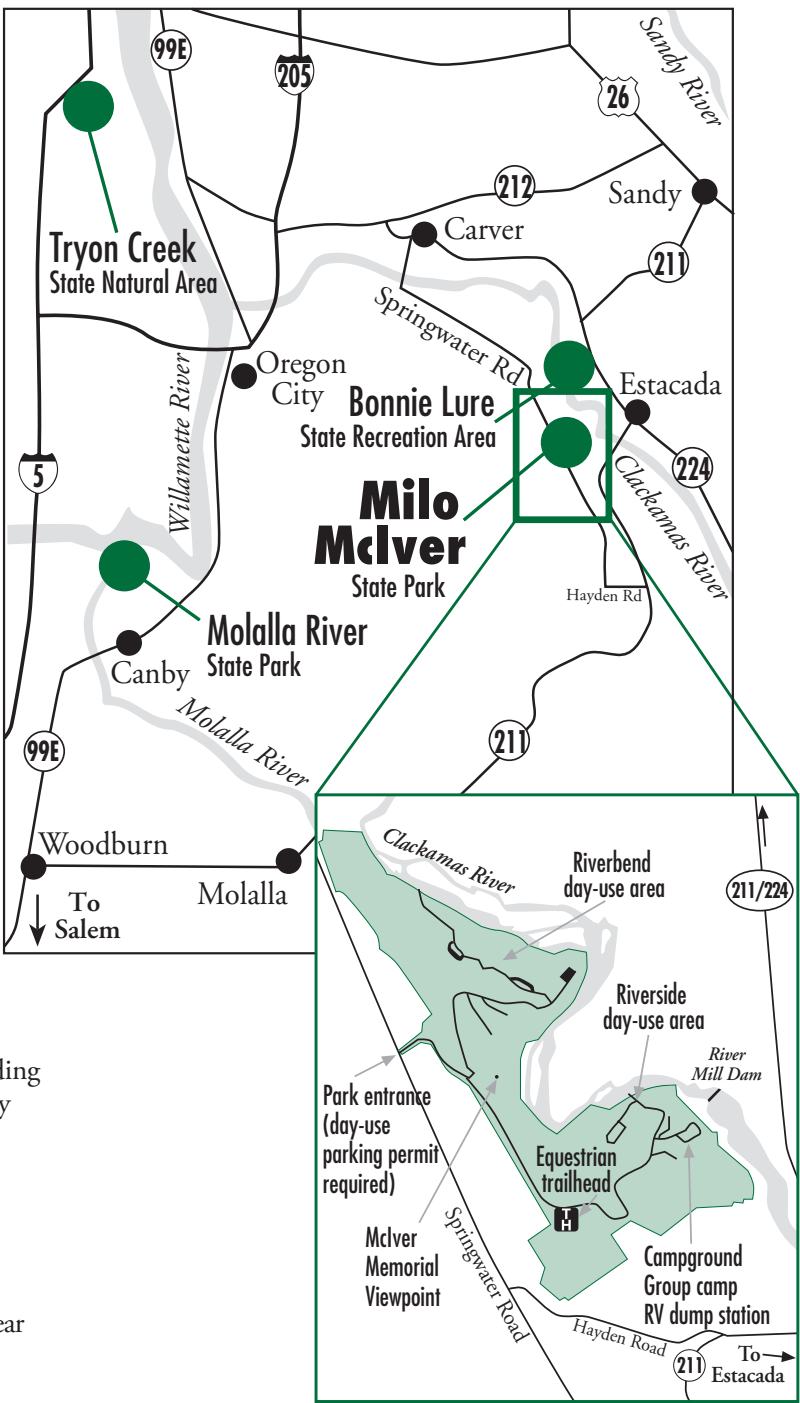

The park has many access points to the Clackamas River. Do not try to navigate the river unless you have the proper equipment and skill. The river current can be swift. Always wear a life jacket.
