Recreation Opportunity Guide

Distance..... 12.2 miles (one way)
Elevation..... 1600-5040 feet

Trail Highlights: This trail is in the Mount Hood Wilderness Area and it provides the west to east transportation network for the upper south slope of Mount Hood. Two abandoned lookout sites are located along the trail. Huckleberries can be abundant from September to frost. There are many great views of Mt. Hood along this trail.

Trail Description: This trail begins at Forest Road 1819 (East Mountain Drive) and ends at Paradise Park Trail #778. This frequently maintained trail is mostly moderately wide single track trail with the occasional rocky section. Trail traffic is typically light to moderate with the most traffic seen from Devil's Tie Trail #767 to Horseshoe Ridge #774. Leaving from Forest Road 1819 (1,600'), the trail climbs 3.5 miles to Zigzag Mountain (4,400'). The trail continues on the ridge 1.1 miles to West Zigzag Mountain Trail #789, shortly after passing West Zigzag Mountain. From Trail #789, the trail continues on the ridge heading west 1.9 miles to Horseshoe Trail #774. From this junction, the trail continues climbing 1.6 miles to Devil's Tie Trail #767. Head north from #767 0.2 miles to the Cast Lake Trail #796. Stay straight on #775 0.1 mile to Cast Creek Trail #773. The trail heads west again for 0.7 mile passing Zigzag East Lookout on the way to Burnt Lake Trail #772. Continue a further 0.3 mile to a second junction with Burnt Lake Trail #772. From here the trail continues climbing west 2.9 miles to its end at Paradise Park Trail #778 (5,040'). There are few reliable sources for water along this trail, so be sure to carry enough water. There are many trails intersecting this trail that make interesting additions to an out-and-back route or a point-to-point, shuttle route.
